SCHENECTADY (city). County seat. Covers a land area of 10.779 square miles and a water area of 0.185 square miles. Located at 42.80° N. Lat; 73.93° W. Long. Elevation is 243 feet.
History: The site of Schenectady was called "Schonowe" meaning "big flats" by the Mohawk people. In 1662, Arent Van Curler, with a small group of Dutchmen, emigrated from Albany to the "Groote Vlachte" ("big flats") and purchased land. The first major migration of English into Schenectady began about 1700. In 1848, a locomotive factory was organized that was Schenectady's largest industry for a half century. In 1886, Thomas A. Edison bought two abandoned factory buildings for the Edison Company. In 1892 it was consolidated with the Thompson-Huston Company of Lynn, Massachusetts, to form the General Electric Company. Schenectady became the city that "lights and hauls the world."
