

RECENT REVIEWS

The Grey House Safety & Security Directory

“Since 1943, A.M. Best has published A.M. Best’s Safety & Security Directory. Grey House Publishing purchased this publication and has published it since 2002. The material included in this work is extremely useful. Chapters include Safety Management, Consulting, Insurance and Loss Control, Electrical and Lighting Safety, Employee Health Maintenance and Ergonomics, Facilities Monitoring, and Fall Protection. A typical chapter covers a given topic and includes sections on OSHA requirements, articles on selected aspects of the topic (denoted as “Training Articles”), self-inspection checklists, and a directory of vendors appropriate to each chapter’s topic. Advertisements are placed within their corresponding sections. Articles introduce major points of safety, followed by a brief statement about the author. Many authors are either manufacturers or consultants. This resource serves as an excellent desktop resource for the safety officer of an organization and others interested in safety and security.”

- Medical Reference Services Quarterly

“The addition of training articles and checklists written by experts in the field makes this much more than a standard product/service directory...This continues to be the standard reference tool for safety professionals. It is appropriate for special and public libraries as well as academic collections supporting programs such as building construction, engineering, food services management, and safety management.”

- ARBA

“This... is an important resource for accessing OSHA regulations, self-inspection checklists, training articles on state-of-the-industry trends and programs, as well as buyers’ guides.

The accompanying, easy-to-use Website (www.greyhouse.com) provides online access to downloadable .pdf files that managers can store in a laptop and print out at job sites. Six important indexes provide added access points...Since the terrorist attacks on September 11, 2001, safety and security have been in the forefront for US citizens and businesses. Professionals and businesses will use this guide for OSHA regulations, training, and finding necessary supplies and services.”

- ARBA

“...presents industrial safety information for engineers, plant managers, risk managers, and construction site supervisors, among others. Sixteen chapters cover administrative, electrical, health, facilities, fire, falls, food, machining, materials handling, and noise issues. “Security Resources” is new, listing resources and agencies with data about workplace security (no associated OSHA provision). Twenty-two training articles offer compliance checklists, response cards, and ads for thousands of products aimed at OSHA compliance. The comprehensive table of contents makes information easy to find...”

- Choice

Grey House Publishing

185 Millerton Road PO Box 860 Millerton, NY 12546
(800) 562-2139 (518) 789-8700 FAX (518) 789-0556
www.greyhouse.com books@greyhouse.com