Global Terror & Political Risk Assessment

“... this one-volume source is packed with information that academics and students in political science, security, or international business programs would find invaluable. An excellent source for detailed political and terrorism risk analysis; highly recommended for academic libraries as well as public libraries with users in international business.”

- Library Journal

“This new annual publication from Grey House Publishing deserves a look from larger colleges and special libraries where political risk assessment topics are taught or researched. It contains extensive discussion of events from 2009 as well as predictions of activity for 2010. Compiled by the consultants at Exclusive Analysis, a British risk assessment and intelligence company, the book offers a plethora of events, analysis, and prediction about risk for businesses, nongovernmental organizations, and individuals with investments or interests around the globe.

The cost of the publication is high, but the money will be well spent for the value provided to users requiring this kind of information.”
